FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Allegheny Energy Employees Receive National Award

Hagerstown, Md., November 7, 2001—Allegheny Energy is proud to announce that Pamela Mills and Ida Taylor, employees at the Company's Hagerstown Corporate Headquarters, received Black Opinion magazine's Black Achievers Award for their outstanding contributions on the job and in their communities. Mills and Taylor are among four Allegheny Energy employees selected to receive the awards this year.

Mills, Executive Director, Policy and Programs, joined Allegheny Energy in 1999. She is active in Big Brothers Big Sisters and is a member of Women in Governmental Relations and the Washington Government Relations Group. Mills received a doctor of jurisprudence from Boston College, a master's degree in educational administration from Columbia University, and a bachelor's degree in education and communication arts from the State University of New York.

Taylor, General Manager, Administration, joined Allegheny Energy in 2000, having previously worked for Mountaineer Gas for more than 26 years. She is a member of the American Business Women's Association and Washington County Women's Commission. In addition, Taylor has been certified as a Senior Professional in Human Resources since 1995. She previously served on the Board of Directors for the YWCA in Charleston, W.Va. Taylor received a bachelor's degree in business administration from West Virginia State College.

"These employees have excelled both on and off the job," says Alan J. Noia, Chairman of the Board, President, and Chief Executive Officer. "Their outstanding commitment to the Company and to their communities is to be commended. It's wonderful to see their accomplishments recognized at this level."

Also receiving awards were Jim Edwards, Transmission Marketer, at the Company's Greensburg Corporate Center in Pennsylvania, and English Webb, Director, Administration, at Allegheny's Monroeville Energy Center.
